SESSION TITLE	Reaching Zero-Dose And Under-Immunized Children In Remote And Underserved Settings Of Ethiopia: Evaluation, Project Hope, 2022	Re-imagining community involvement to increase immunization coverage in humanitarian context in South west region of Burkina Faso	Engagement of community health workers for improved PHC services: TIMCI implementation experience in Tanzania	Community Engagement: an important piece in improving PHC service delivery
SESSION DESCRIPTION	Ethiopia's childhood vaccination improved, but issues remain. 23% kids were zero-dose, 39% under-immunized in 2019. Political unrest and COVID-19 threaten gains. This project maps clusters, explores barriers, aiming to aid policy for zero-dose and under-immunized kids. Session gives an overview, strategies, and lessons learned.	Burkina Faso has experienced a humanitarian crisis born of armed conflicts since 2015, coupled with the 2019 Covid-19 outbreak straining the functioning of the health system. Community participation contributed to extend PHC coverage and successful ground health education to meet population immunization needs in fragile settings.	Community awareness of disease danger signs is crucial for PHC. PATH, with partners Swiss Tropical, Ifakara Health Research Institute, Tanzanian government, engaged CHWs to lead community sensitization. This strategy enhances caregiver understanding, improving engagement with healthcare services.	The "Three Delays" model identifies pregnancy-related mortality reasons: seeking help, reaching a facility, and receiving care. Pathfinder's SMGL 2.0 in Nigeria's Kaduna state targets these delays. The project aims to reduce maternal and perinatal mortality in line with state government efforts.

SESSION TITLE	Investing in Health Worker Safety: Results from a Multi-modal Infection Prevention and Control (IPC) Program at Select Health Facilities in Five African Countries during the COVID-19 Pandemic	Establishing Community Linkages to Strengthen Primary Health Care Services: The Role of Community Health Influencers Promoters and Services Implementation in Ohaozara LGA, Ebonyi State, Nigeria	Evaluation of capacity building interventions aimed at health extension workers (HEWs) in Ethiopia: A systematic review	Empowering Women for Equitable Healthcare Delivery: Strategies and Innovations
SESSION DESCRIPTION	This program aimed to improve health facility infection prevention and control (IPC) performance and health worker behavior to reduce health worker infections.	Community-based strategies bring low-cost and quality healthcare closer, strengthening systems. US President Malaria Initiative backs Ebonyi State's CHIPS program, enhancing access to vital maternal and child health services in hard to reach regions.	Ethiopia's health system relies on health extension workers (HEWs) for universal health coverage. HEWs deployed since 2003, but their availability isn't enough. Capacity-building interventions have been ongoing. This paper reviews outcomes/impact of these interventions on HEWs' capacity in Ethiopia.	Join us to explore women's leadership in PHC and community settings. Learn best practices, highlight women's roles, networks, mentorships. Discover advocacy for gender equality, diverse policies, inclusive healthcare. Gain insights into empowered women shaping equitable, effective healthcare systems.
